LOAN EXHIBITION OF PORTRAIT MINIATURES.

I.

THE Miniatures which formed a section of the Loan Collection in 1862, were objects of so much interest that it is proposed to give a further development to an exhibition of this art—in which English artists were the first to excel, and which, though now seldom practised, flourished in England for nearly three centuries.

2. The Loan Collection comprised chiefly the works of our early Miniaturists, Hilliard, Isaac and Peter Oliver, and Cooper (works which possessed an antiquarian interest), with a few by Cosway, R.A., and some other artists. But the object of a second collection, though not confined to the productions of English Miniaturists, should especially be to make a representative exhibition of their works, identified with their, in so many instances, almost forgotten names.

3. In seeking the assistance of the collectors and possessors of Miniature art, they should therefore be particularly solicited to state as far as it is possible to do so authentically:—

- I. The name and titles of the persons represented and the date of the portrait.
- II. The Christian and Surname of the artist, and
- III. His birth-place, date of birth, and death (where not commonly known) with any other particulars that may prove of interest.

A request should at the same time be made that such persons will kindly point out any other persons who possess miniatures, which it is probable they will lend for exhibition.

The Collection might be completed so as to open some time in June next, and should include Miniature Portraits—

- I. In Enamel.
- II. In Oil and in Water Colours.
- III. In Chalk, or in Pencil, whether drawn on vellum, or paper, in plumbago solely, or in the latter manner with the face tinted.

The following by no means exhaustive list, contains the names of many of the artists who practised in England and whose works should be sought out and solicited for exhibition.

Miniaturists of the 16th Century.

Hans Holbein.	Nicholas Hilliard.
John Bettes.	Isaac Oliver.
Thomas Bettes.

Miniaturists of the 17th Century.

 &c. &c.

Mr. R. F. Sketchley (a member of the Committee) acted as Secretary for the Special Exhibition, and the Rev. James Beck, M.A. with Mr. R. H. Soden Smith, M.A., took an active share in the formation of the Exhibition and preparation of the Catalogue.

INTRODUCTORY NOTICE.

THE Miniature Art of England possesses this distinguished peculiarity—that, while no native painter had attained excellence in life-sized oil portraiture before the time of Vandyke, we have in Miniature Art a succession of eminent “painters in little,” commencing with Nicholas Hilliard in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and continued by John Hoskins, the two Olivers, father and son, down to the inimitable Samuel Cooper, in the reign of Charles I.

The Works of these men became the treasures of their own and of succeeding generations. Unlike the larger portraits of their foreign competitors, which, in the troubled days that ensued, were exposed to all the mutations of our great families, the miniature was mostly a cherished decoration worn about the person and easily concealed. Many have thus descended to us, inestimable both for their art and as the sole recollections of several of England’s most distinguished men, while others, despoiled in times of need of their jewelled settings, have been lost or destroyed.

Miniature painting appears to have naturally arisen in the development of the ancient missal painter’s practise, and in its first stages to have been connected with the ornamental art of the goldsmith and the jeweller. The miniaturist began by using the opaque colours of the missal painter, and like him he introduced gold to heighten the effect of his dresses and ornaments; but as the art progressed we find him treating the face, and then other parts of his work, with transparent colour. The earliest miniatures were drawn on vellum or on thin cardboard. The artists we have mentioned, to whom should be added Thomas Flatman, a poet as well as a painter, practised in this manner. Soon after, the art of painting with vitrifiable colours added greater lustre and brilliancy to the miniaturist's skill; and later, probably in the reign of James II, ivory was substituted for paper or vellum, giving the means of more delicate completion, and, by its creamy whiteness, increased beauty of colour.

The art of enamelling is of great antiquity and uncertain origin. The encrusted enamels of Limoges were mostly applied to utensils for the church, and were the admiration of the 13th century. Benvenuto Cellini used this process to heighten the perfection of his works in silver and gold, and the goldsmiths of Germany employed it with success in reproducing the designs of Hans Holbein. About the beginning of the 15th century, by an improved process, painted enamels became applicable to miniature portraits, an art which was certainly derived from France, but was not brought to much perfection till towards the middle of the 17th century.

In 1632 a goldsmith, named Jean Toutin, who was skilled in the use of transparent enamels, produced a variety of colours which when used upon a thin ground of white enamel vitrified in the furnace without any change of tint. These colours were applied in the same manner as water colours used on vellum or ivory; they were the materials of the first miniaturists, and a few years later they enabled the great Jean Petitot to carry the art to its highest excellence. They consisted of metallic oxides with fluxes of vitrifiable substances, chiefly silica and borax, both fusible at a heat capable of being resisted by the metal ground, whether gold or copper, on which they are to be used; it is also essential that these materials should be of a character to adhere firmly to the ground, should possess the transparency or opacity required to give finish to the artist's work, and maintain after fusion a clear smooth vitreous surface.

The colour produced results either simply from the colouring material used, or from the chemical combination of that material with the flux. The delicacy of the whole process will appear surprising when the brilliancy of colour and the minute beauty and perfection of finish attainable in the enamelled miniature are considered; and that the work, when completed, unites these qualities with its imperishable character.

There is, however, another class of artists whom we now term miniaturists, who practised towards the latter half of the 17th century. They were by education engravers, and both drew from the life and engraved the subjects of their portraiture, as is recorded on their plates "ad vivum." In this manner David Loggan, his pupil Robert White, and Thomas Forster, attained great excellence. Their works formed the portrait frontispieces of the books of that time, and were among the first book illustrations. Dryden writes of a would-be poet,—

"And at the front of all his senseless plays Makes David Loggan crown his head with bays."

And the impressions of the plates of these artists, as well as their highly wrought drawings, were then, and continue to be, highly prized by collectors.

Such was the art of our first miniature painters. Commencing on card or vellum, then using the newly discovered enamel process, and lastly, ivory, as the means of higher perfection, and contemporary with this the drawing in plumbago, as it was then called.

When portrait art in England degenerated after the death of Vandyke, and Lely and Kneller were followed by Jervis and Hudson, miniature painting fell into the same debasement. One of the sons of Petitot, and of the same Christian name, settled in London at this time, and practised miniature enamel. Charles Boit also came to our Metropolis, and painted in enamel under the patronage of Queen Anne. But the art languished in their hands till Christian F. Zincke, founding his style, it is true, after Kneller, and some while the pupil of Boit, painted in enamel with great industry and success. Commencing with the beginning of the 18th century, he was for many years without a rival, and his works are justly admired for their beauty of execution and correct drawing.

When at length the portrait painter's art received a new impulse from the noble works of Reynolds and Gainsborough, a new school of miniaturists grew up, and the art again shone lustreously in the works of Jeremiah Meyer, Nathaniel Hone, Richard Cosway, Samuel Shelley, Richard Collins, John Smart, and a number of other talented men, who, far from lacking employment, were beset by fashion; and beauty was decked with lockets, brooches, and bracelets, in which the painter's work vied with the precious materials of the jeweller's. Under such encouragement another generation of miniaturists succeeded, and the art in modern days culminated with Henry Edridge, Henry Bone, Andrew Robertson, Alfred Chalon, Sir William Ross, and some few eminent men who have survived it,—for, strange to say, miniature painting, which had during nearly three centuries been practised by so many great artists, suddenly collapsed before the cheap mechanical processes of photography, and is now almost lost.

At this crisis the present exhibition has been formed; it will awaken many recollections, will bring again into notice men of the past generation, whose names and works deserve to live in our memories, and with regard to whom some few facts will be found appended to the Catalogue, but confined chiefly to deceased artists of the English school. However meagre these notices may appear, the information has been sought in many sources, and will be gladly extended by any facts which may yet be supplied by relatives or friends.

At the very outset of the undertaking the question arose—what constitutes a miniature portrait? It was admitted that miniatures may be painted or drawn on any material, and with any material used by the artist, and in every style of art. Commening with the head only, to which the skill of some of our early "face painters" was limited, we find their works followed by miniature half-lengths, whole-lengths, and groups; but from these no technical accepted definition of the term miniature can be derived. Without, therefore, attempting to lay down a rule, it was deemed best, in the interests of the Exhibition, to accept all such works as were drawn to a small scale, and were in respect to manner of a miniature character, except paintings on porcelain. Many works were offered which did not possess this character; many more whose art-merits did not entitle them to a place in the Exhibition,—while some have been admitted as forming part of a collection, or as representing the art of a known painter though their merit is but of a low class.

In determining the scheme for arranging the Exhibition, it would have been most natural to have proceeded chronologically, by which both the artist and his subject (except where an old portrait had been copied, as is often the case with the enamellist) would have been brought into their due places; and the Exhibition rendered more interesting in the exemplification of art, biography, and the study of costume. But among other difficulties which presented themselves, the separation of family miniatures, and of the possessions of distinguished collectors, were obstacles which could not be properly overlooked; and on these grounds, as well as from the necessity which would have been unavoidable of deferring the arrangement till the whole of the works had been received, any attempt at chronological sequence was abandoned. It is proposed, however, to compile Chronological and Historical Indexes for the assistance of students and visitors.

It is also essential to explain that, except in some few cases of obvious error, the names both of the persons represented and of the artists, have been catalogued as described by the possessors of the works lent, as it was not deemed right, however strong the presumption, to attempt to disturb names which have possibly been traditional for several generations, or just towards those who have so graciously lent their family treasures. In several cases where the name of the painter of a miniature was unknown to its possessors, it has been added, where this could be satisfactorily done. But for the reasons given, the Catalogue cannot be referred to as evidence of the authenticity of works whose origin is doubtful.

We trust it is not beyond hope that the Exhibition of the works of so many distinguished men, and the beauty of their art, may lead to its revival. At least, it seems not unreasonable to expect that the collection will conduce to a more general appreciation of the value of the works which remain to us, and tend to their better preservation; for it is truly painful to see how many fine miniatures have been exposed to the sun till all their colour has been absolutely burnt out, while others have equally suffered from damp, or from the absence of the most ordinary protection required for works of such minute delicacy. But worst of all are the ruthless, ignorant repairs which many have undergone, destroying every trace of the genius which had once characterized them, and bringing them down to the level of the many made-up deceptions of past generations no less than of our own.

1064. PORTRAIT OF KING CHARLES I.

This interesting relic is formed of the king's hair dipped in his blood on the scaffold. The long hair which he wore was probably cut off for the convenience of the executioner; for Sir Henry Halford, describing the condition of the remains when examined in 1813 by order of the Prince Regent, states that at the back of the head the hair was cut short. It has always been considered an heirloom in the family and belonged to John Winckley, who was executed at Lancaster Castle in 1716, with the Earl of Derwentwater, for the Jacobite rising of 1715. On the back of the token are engraved the names of those of the family who adhered to the cause of the Stuarts in 1745, viz. S. Hesketh, R. Hesketh, N. Winckley, T. Winckley. The Dowager Lady Shelley, to whom it was bequeathed by her father, the late Thomas Winckley Esq., of Brockholes, co. Lancaster, remembers wearing it, when a child, on some Jacobite anniversary, about 1790.

1833. PORTRAITS OF EARL RIVERS, &c. Water colour, on paper.

Copied from an illuminated MS., inscribed as follows:
"Earl Rivers presenting his book, and Caxton his printer, to Edw. IV, the Queen, and Prince. From a curious MS. in the Archbishop's Library at Lambeth. The portrait of the Prince (afterw^{ds} Edw. 5th), is the only one known of him, and has been engraved by Vertue among the heads of the kings. The person in a cap and robe of state is probably Richard D. of Gloucester, as he resembles the king, and as Clarence was always too great an enemy of the Queen to be distinguished by her brother. The book was printed in 1477, when Clarence was in Ireland; in the beginning of the next year he was murdered." From the Strawberry Hill Collection.

2166. VENETIA LADY DIGBY, represented as she was found dead in her bed. After Vandyke, painted in 1633. Peter Oliver.

She was the daughter of Sir Edward Stanley and his wife Lady Lucy Percy, and was born 1600, and married Sir Kenelm Digby.
She is mentioned by Lord Clarendon as "of an extraordinary beauty and as extraordinary fame." She died in 1633. Inscribed
"The Ladye Digby A.D. 1633 Æt. 32 M. 4. D. 12." The miniature is mounted in black enamel, and on the back is represented a sphere, on which Walpole remarks, "It seems to mean the world was in mourning for her."—From the Strawberry Hill Collection.

- AYLING, W. P. 88.
- BARBIER, P. P. 251.
- BARCLAY, HUGH, 22, Tiverton Street, Gordon Square.
- BARCLAY, HUGH. Born in London 1797, and practised miniature painting there, and also in Paris, in which city he was much engaged making copies in the Louvre from the great Italian masters. He died 1859.
- BARCLAY, W. Pp. 276, 277.
- BARRETT, MISS M. Was the daughter of George Barrett, R. A., who at his death in 1784, left his family in great difficulties, and the sister of George Barrett, a member of the Water Colour Society. She commenced art as a miniature painter, and first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1797, and in the following two or three years was an exhibitor.
- BARRY, J. First appears as an exhibitor of miniatures at the Royal Academy in 1781. In 1786 he exhibited "the four seasons" in miniature. In 1789, Mrs. Crouch, as Selima. He continued to exhibit till 1819, after which his name disappears. Pp. 45, 46, 149, 209.

- BOGLE, JOHN. Practised miniature painting about the middle of the 18th century. He first appears as an exhibitor at the Royal Academy in 1772, and continued to exhibit up to 1799, when his name disappears. His works were highly finished, and he was a good artist, but he died in great poverty. He has been described as a little lame man, very poor, very proud, and very singular. Pp. 37, 89.
- BOIT, CHARLES. Born at Stockholm; son of a Frenchman. Bred a jeweller, and came to England to practise that trade. Afterwards tried enamel painting, which he practised here with great success in the reign of Queen Anne. He attempted a very large enamel of the Queen and her Court, but failed after many experiments, ran into debt, and fled to France. His works were greatly admired in Paris, and a pension granted to him. He died there in 1726. Pp. 39, 55, 60, 61, 76, 79, 80, 120, 142, 184, 206, 263.
- BONE, HENRY, R. A. Born at Truro, 1755, and in 1771 was employed in a china manufactory at Plymouth, and removed to Bristol with that establishment. In 1778 he came to London and found employment in painting devices in enamel on lockets and other small personal ornaments. On the change in this fashion, he tried miniatures in water-colour, and in 1794 became known by an enamel of "The Sleeping Girl" after Reynolds, which was the commencement of his practice in portrait enamel, and the foundation of his art. At the latter part of his life, his eye-sight failing, he was compelled to receive the pension of the Royal Academy. He died in 1834. Pp. 15, 30, 31, 45, 46, 47, 52, 74, 75, 94, 135, 162, 175, 216, 222, 241, 244, 251, 262, 264, 266.

* COLLINS, RICHARD. Was a pupil of J. Meyer, R.A. and divided, with Cofway and Shelley, the fashionable fitters of the day. He commenced exhibiting at the Royal Academy in 1777, and practised both in enamel and on ivory. In 1789 he was appointed painter in enamel to the king, and executed some fine portraits of the Royal Family. He retired to Worcesterfhire about 1811, but towards the latter part of his life he returned to end his days among his old affociates in London, and died about 1831, aged nearly 80 years.

COLLINS, SAMUEL. A miniature painter of great excellence in the reign of K. George III. Pp. 38, 93.

COMERFORD, JOHN. Son of a respectable tradesman in Kilkenny, where he was born, and gained some knowledge of art, copying in oil from the Marquis of Ormonde's pictures. He afterwards settled in Dublin, and gained an independence by the successful practice of miniature painting. He died about 1832, aged 70 years. Pp. 19, 227, 245.

COOPER, ALEXANDER. P. 268.

COOPER, SAMUEL. Born in London 1609. Pupil of Hoskins, his uncle,—and studied the manner of Vandyke. Was pre-eminent in miniature art, and his works became prized both in France and Italy. He spent many years on the Continent and was intimate with some of the most distinguished men of his day. He also excelled as a linguist, and as a lute-player. His widow received a pension from the crown. His miniatures are commonly signed with his cypher. He died 1672. Pp. 4, 18, 20, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 34, 36, 38, 40, 54, 57, 61, 62, 71, 72, 74, 77, 78, 79, 81, 87, 88, 90, 99, 105, 116, 121, 122, 125, 132, 133, 135, 140, 141, 142, 144, 145, 146, 163, 167, 169, 173, 175, 176, 180, 185, 186, 187, 189, 194, 197, 229, 236, 264, 265, 273, 274.

COPLEY, JOHN SINGLETON, R. A. The distinguished history painter. Born Boston, U. S. 1737. Came to England, where he settled, 1774, and studied art. Died in London 1815. P. 119.

COSTER, MADAME. (See Vallayer.) P. 14.

COSWAY, MARIA. Her maiden name was Hadfield, the daughter of an English hotel-keeper, at Leghorn. She married Richard Cosway, R. A., and showed much talent for art, not only painting portrait miniatures, but small subject pictures, several of which were engraved. She lived in London with great luxury—and scandal, so busy with her husband, did not spare her. Handsome, and gifted with much talent, she strove to shine in society, but in 1804 retired to a religious house at Lyons, of which she became the superioress. P. 135.

COSWAY, RICHARD, R. A. Born at Tiverton 1741. First placed under Hudson, then entered Shipley's school in St. Martin's Lane, and in 1769 was admitted a student of the Royal Academy. Commenced art as a miniature painter, was largely employed, and soon became the fashionable miniaturist of his time. His works were marked by correct taste and beauty, and gained him the patronage and favour of the Prince of Wales. Diminutive in person, he was vain, eccentric, believed, or pretended to believe, himself inspired, and became the object of bitter satire. He died in 1821. Pp. 4, 8, 14, 15, 19, 22, 24, 30, 31, 42, 47, 49, 52, 59, 61, 72, 76, 85, 92, 95, 96, 104, 111, 114, 115, 116, 117, 126, 127, 128, 158, 171, 175, 176, 181, 187, 188, 189, 190, 192, 193, 194, 204, 205, 209, 213, 214, 218, 221, 222, 227, 229, 230, 231, 236, 250, 255, 257, 260, 267.

*COTES, SAMUEL, son of an Irish gentleman who came to London about 1720, and practised as an apothecary. He was born in London and brought up to his father's profession, but quitted it, encouraged by the success of his brother (Francis Cotes, R.A.) to follow art. He soon excelled in crayon portraits, and became one of the most distinguished miniature and enamel painters of the day. He died in 1818, in his 85th year, having long previously quitted his profession.

DANIELL, ABRAHAM, of Bath. Painted in the latter part of the last century. Died at Bath, after a long illness, in 1803. His miniatures are marked by great simplicity and breadth. Pp. 59, 60.

DAYES, EDWARD. Pupil of William Pether, and a good draughtsman. He commenced art as a miniature painter, and his miniatures have much merit; but he is better known as a topographical water-colour painter of the early tinted school. He drew an elaborate picture, filled with figures, of the royal procession to St. Paul's in 1789, and another work of the same class, the Trial of Warren Hastings. He wrote several works on art. He died by his own hand in May, 1804. P. 16.

- * FAITHORNE, WILLIAM. Born in 1616. Brought up as an engraver. Served in the Royal army during the Civil War, and was taken prisoner at the siege of Basing House. In confinement he resumed his profession of engraver, and retired to France on gaining his release. About 1650 he returned to London, and opening a shop for the sale of engravings, devoted himself to his art, and also drew portraits from the life in chalk, chiefly confining himself to the half-length or the head only. He died 1691.

- GERBIER, SIR BALTHAZAR, Knt. Born at Antwerp about 1591. Came to England as a retainer of the Duke of Buckingham in 1613. He accompanied the duke to Spain, ostensibly as an artist, and painted a miniature portrait of the Infanta; but was probably found useful in matters connected with the prince's marriage scheme. On the accession of Charles the first he was employed in Flanders to negotiate a treaty with Spain, and became a favourite of the king, who with the queen he entertained at supper in 1628, and in the same year he was knighted. He styled himself "Painter and Architect." He died 1667. Pp. 67, 100, 101, 269.
- GIBSON, RICHARD, known as The Dwarf. Born in 1615, it is supposed in Cumberland. He was originally page to a lady at Mortlake, and showing a taste for drawing, was placed by her under De Cleyn, who then carried on the tapestry works there. He married a lady, also a dwarf, in the presence of Charles I. and his Queen, and Sir Peter Lely painted the little pair hand in hand. Gibson painted portraits both in oil and crayons, and was well encouraged; but his best works were his copies after Lely. He died in 1690. Pp. 138, 139, 140, 180, 184.

- HILL, MRS. H. Pp. 128, 253, 254.
- HILLIARD, NICHOLAS. Born at Exeter 1547. He was apprenticed to a goldsmith, and having studied the works of Holbein, he practised limning, carrying on at the same time his goldsmith's business. He was appointed goldsmith, carver, and limner to Queen Elizabeth, and his office was continued by patent of James I, with the exclusive privilege to draw

- and imprint the "Royal Image." He died 1619. Pp. 6, 21, 26, 29, 37, 50, 51, 65, 84, 133, 134, 138, 140, 141, 142, 146, 147, 153, 163, 180, 181, 186, 214, 218, 235, 238, 243, 270.
- HOBDAV, W. Painted about the beginning of the century, and occasionally exhibited. He died in 1831, aged 57. Pp. 210, 253.
- HOLBEIN, HANS. Born in 1498, at Basle, or at Augsburg, where his father was a painter. Under him he studied with great success, and learnt also graving, casting, modelling, and architecture. Yet, master of all these arts, he was poor, wasting his gains in debauchery. He came to England in 1526, bringing an introduction from Erasmus to Sir Thomas More, with whom he at once found employment. At the end of three years he gained by the favour of Sir Thomas the patronage of Henry VIII, who took him into his service, and gave him apartments in his palace, with a salary of 200 florins. He painted in oil and water colours, both opaque and transparent. His miniatures are spiritedly drawn, and finished with great delicacy and power. He was ambi-dexter. He is generally stated to have died in England of the Plague in 1554. But a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine for April, 1861, states that his will had been found in the Registry of London, which proves him to have died in 1543. Pp. 51, 52, 61, 85, 87, 99, 124, 138, 141, 142, 146, 147, 162, 168, 187, 188, 243, 247, 248, 270, 271.

- HONE, NATHANIEL, R. A. Born in Dublin about 1730. Came to England early in life, and painted in several parts of the country, particularly at York. Then settling in London, he practised portrait painting in miniature and in oil, and more especially in enamel, becoming after the death of Zincke the most distinguished enamellist of his day. He was one of the foundation members of the Royal Academy, but had a pique against Reynolds, whom he satirized and quarrelled with. He died in 1784. Pp. 5, 14, 15, 16, 24, 74, 80, 117, 125, 139, 175, 177, 205, 228, 237, 241, 245, 273.

- HOPKINS, WILLIAM. Painted portraits and allegorical subjects. He was living in 1810, but no further trace of him now. P. 115.
- HOSKINS, JOHN. Practised his art in the reign of Charles I, commencing as a painter in oil, and then turning to miniature, in which he excelled. Sir Kenelm Digby says that by his "paintings in little he pleased more than Vandyke." His miniatures bear his initials H. Pp. 21, 26, 73, 99, 100, 104, 120, 132, 133, 140, 142, 144, 152, 163, 168, 174, 180, 185, 186, 188.
- HOSKINS, JOHN, the younger son of the foregoing, and practised the same art; but little is known of him. His miniatures are signed by his initials, thus I·H. Pp. 25, 87, 123, 131, 144, 215, 219.
- HOYOLL, PHILIP. P. 282.
- HUMMEL. P. 147.
- HUMPHREY, OZIAS. Was born at Honiton in 1742. Studied in Shipley's well-known S. Martin's-lane drawing school, and then became pupil of Samuel Collins, the miniature painter. He practised for a time at Bath, and in 1764 settled in London, where his miniatures attracted great notice, and gained him the Royal patronage. In 1773 he travelled

- to Rome and the great art cities of Italy. Returning in 1777, he tried the higher ranks of art, but unsuccessfully, and in 1785 went to India. His weak health compelled his return. He found full employment at home, but in 1797 his eyesight entirely failed. He died in 1800. Pp. 47, 48, 59, 75, 78, 111, 119, 130, 138, 178, 184, 197, 208, 232, 240, 252, 259, 271.

On the restoration was appointed principal painter to Charles II, and engrossed all the fashion of his day. His "Beauties" at Hampton Court are well known. He amassed a large fortune. Died 1680. Pp. 23, 235.
- LEONI, CAVALIERE OTTAVIO. Born at Rome 1574, died 1628. P. 172.
- LENS, BERNARD. Son of a mezzotint engraver and draftsman of the same name. Born in London in 1680. He was a good copyist of Vandyke, Rubens, and other masters, and also a teacher of drawing, the Duke of Cumberland and two of the Princesses being among the number of his pupils. He died in 1740. Two of his sons practised miniature painting with credit. Pp. 22, 29, 30, 31, 77, 79, 123, 140, 151, 210, 217, 220, 221.
- LENS, A. B. The signature "A. B. L.," as a monogram, occurs; perhaps that of a son of the preceding. P. 216. See also p. 22.
- LENS, BARNERD, the Younger. P. 122.
- LENS, PETER. It is not improbable that this artist was the father of the elder Bernard Lens, who we are told was a painter in enamel. We find many miniatures signed with the initials "P. L.," and one with the signature "P. Lens," very legibly inscribed, which appears to confirm this supposition. Pp. 228, 256.

- LIOTARD, JOHN STEPHEN. Born at Geneva in 1702. Was destined for commerce, but had a love for art, and when at Paris in 1725, found the means of study. He painted portraits in miniature and in pastel. In Rome he painted the Pope and the Stuart Family, and from that city he travelled to Constantinople, where he adopted the Turkish costume. At Vienna the Imperial Family sat to him. He came to London with powerful introductions, and painted the Princess of Wales and her two sons—becoming so popular as, it is said, to make Reynolds jealous. His miniatures are few, his chief works being in pastel. He died about 1790. Pp. 1, 3, 47, 180, 192, 195.
- LOGGAN, DAVID. Born at Dantzic about 1630. Had some instruction from Simon Pafis, and afterwards, in Holland, under Hondius. Came to England before the Restoration. He drew portraits with a black lead pencil with great truth and skill, delicately finished. He published illustrations of Oxford and Cambridge, and many portraits of eminent men drawn and engraved by himself. He died in London in 1693. Pp. 18, 41, 104, 182, 239, 260, 266.
- LONGHI. P. 183.
- LOVER, S. P. 242.
- LUCAN, MARGARET Countess of. Showed great talent and industry in copying miniatures and illuminations, and made many successful copies after Holkyns, the Olivers, and Samuel Cooper. She illustrated Shakespeare with copies of portraits, tombs, heraldic devices, flowers, birds, &c. This work in five volumes is preserved at Althorp. See also Bingham. Pp. 2, 28, 76, 221, 255.

- NIXON, JAMES, A.R.A. He was one of the first students admitted on the foundation of the Royal Academy, and first became an exhibitor in 1772. He greatly excelled in miniature art, and painted some theatrical celebrities in character, and some subject pictures. He also occasionally painted in oil. He held the office of Limner to the Prince Regent. Died at Tiverton in 1812, aged 71. Pp. 129, 221.
- OLIVER, A. I., A.R.A. P. 269.
- OLIVER, ISAAC. Born 1556, supposed in Leicestershire. Pupil of Hilliard, and also of Zuccherro, an Italian who came to England and was employed by Queen Elizabeth. He drew both miniatures and historical subjects. He died 1617. Pp. 20, 21, 36-7, 50, 60, 70, 71, 99, 120, 121, 122, 133, 140, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 162, 163, 165, 188, 197, 236, 237, 238, 250.
- OLIVER, PETER. Born 1601. The eldest son and pupil of Isaac Oliver. In his miniatures he excelled his father. He copied in water colours the works of several great Italian painters, and some of these copies are still in the Royal Collection. He died 1660. Pp. 34, 74, 87, 97, 100, 110, 104, 141, 150, 154, 155, 165, 186, 188, 196, 197, 200, 238, 247, 254, 273.

- PETERS, MATTHIAS. Born in Amsterdam 1660. P. 78.
- PETITOT, JEAN. Born at Geneva 1607. Began life as a jeweller, and excelling in the use of enamel, applied himself to portraiture, which he carried to the greatest perfection. He met with great encouragement at the French Court, and then went to Italy to study. He afterwards came to England, and became acquainted with Sir Thomas Mayerne, a distinguished chemist, who assisted him in the preparation and vitrification of his colours, and introduced him to Charles I. The King retained him in his service, and gave him apartments at Whitehall. On the execution of his patron, Petitot followed the exiled family to France, where he enjoyed the favour of Louis XIV. On the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, being a zealous Protestant, he quitted France and returned to Switzerland. If not the inventor of enamel portraiture, he has the merit of having perfected the art. He died 1691. Pp. 5, 6, 7, 11, 23, 27-8, 34, 59-60, 63-5, 66, 67-70, 73, 76, 85, 93, 105, 120, 121, 122, 123, 133, 147, 163, 164, 167, 176, 183, 189, 208, 213, 215, 216, 219, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 232, 234, 238, 239, 248, 258.

PETITOT, JEAN, the younger. Born in 1652. Son and pupil of the celebrated painter in enamel. Settled in London, and practised his art here. Little is known of him. After his death his family removed to Dublin. Pp. 6, 22, 32, 66.

PLIMER, ANDREW. Born at Bridgewater. He first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1786 some miniatures in enamel and on ivory, most of them in character, with some subject pictures apparently in oil, and after that year continued an exhibitor of miniatures with some oil portraits up to 1819. Died in 1837. Pp. 8, 14, 45, 46, 48, 128, 147, 148, 149, 157, 170, 199, 239, 248, 257.

PLIMER, NATHANIEL. Brother to the foregoing. Born 1751 at Wellington, Shropshire. Exhibited at the Royal Academy for the first time in 1787 miniature portraits, and continued occasionally an exhibitor. Died 1822. Pp. 46, 48, 201, 202.

PLOTT, JOHN. Born at Winchester, 1732. Commenced life as clerk to an attorney; then turning to art, he became pupil of Richard Wilson, R.A., and afterwards the assistant in miniature painting of Nathaniel Hone, R.A. On leaving him, he practised both in London and Winchester, as a miniature painter in enamel and water colours, and sometimes in oil. He first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1777, and continued occasionally an exhibitor. He died 1803. Pp. 72, 78.

POELEMBERG, CORNELIUS. Born in Utrecht 1586. Came to England on the invitation of Charles I., and practised here some time. Died at Utrecht 1660. Pp. 41, 42, 100, 104.

POLACK, SOLOMON. Born at the Hague in 1757. Came to England and settled here. He first appears as an exhibitor at the Royal Academy in 1790, and was from that time a contributor. He died at Chelsea in 1839. P. 182, POMPEIO. P. 257.

* POPE, ALEXANDER. Was born in Ireland, and both himself and his wife practised miniature painting. First exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1790, and appears as an occasional exhibitor up to 1821.

PREWETT, WILLIAM. Pupil of Zincke, and practised in enamel towards the middle of the 18th century. Pp. 72, 143, 272.

PRIEUR. P. 7.

RAEBURN, SIR HENRY, R.A. Born near Edinburgh, 1756, and was apprenticed to a goldsmith in that city. Took up miniature painting with so much success, that he left his trade and became a portrait painter, soon practising in oil upon the life-size. He rose to much distinction, and became the President of the Scotch Academy, and Member of the Royal Academy in London. His portraits are highly esteemed for their vigorous delineation of character, power, and colour. He died in 1823. Pp. 45, 264.

- READ, F. T. P. 145.
- REINAGLE, PHILIP, R.A. Born in London 1750. A versatile painter, noted for his power of imitating the Dutch masters. He painted some miniatures on ivory in oil. Died 1833. P. 242.
- REMBRANDT. Born near Leyden 1606, died 1674. P. 100.
- RENTON, JOHN. P. 252.
- REYNOLDS, MISS FRANCES. Sister to Sir Joshua Reynolds. She copied her brother's works, and amused herself in painting. Her best works are her miniatures, in which manner she is said to have painted professionally. Dr. Johnson writes of her in 1758, "Miss is much employed in miniatures," and many years later, "I sat for my picture to Miss Reynolds, perhaps for the tenth time." She died in 1807, aged 80 years. Pp. 15, 128, 206.
- REYNOLDS, SIR JOSHUA, KNT. The distinguished head of the English Portrait School, and the first president of the Royal Academy. Born at Plympton 1723, died 1792. Pp. 193, 202.
- RICHARDSON, JONATHAN. Born 1665, apprenticed to a scrivener, but at the age of 20 turned to art, and became the pupil of Riley. He grew up to much reputation as a portrait painter, and in the barren days which followed the time of Kneller, was deemed the head of his profession. He was also a writer on art, and esteemed an accomplished man. He died in 1745, leaving a large collection of drawings. P. 161.
- RICHMOND, THOMAS. Was born at Kew in 1771, and was a pupil of George Engleheart. He first exhibited miniature portraits at the Royal Academy in 1795. Died in London, 1837. P. 88.

- ROCHE, SAMPSON TOWGOOD. Painted at Bath in the earlier part of the present century. P. 251.
- ROMNEY, GEORGE. Born in Lancashire 1734. Apprenticed to a cabinet-maker. Was an ingenious boy, and tried history painting. Succeeding in his efforts he came to London, and found patrons. Became distinguished for his portraits and the rival of Reynolds, dividing for a time with him the fashionable world. His portraits of Lady Hamilton are

- well known. He was an enthusiast in all things, full of projects, retired and abstemious, and never joined the Royal Academy. He died in 1802.
- ROSE, MRS. SUSAN PENELOPE. Said to have been a daughter of Gibbon the Dwarf. Painted portraits in water colour with much freedom of manner. Died in 1700, aged 48 years. P. 243.
- ROSS, SIR WILLIAM C., R. A. Was born in London in 1795, and the son of a miniature painter. Showed an early predilection for historical art, which he abandoned, and commenced a most successful career as a miniature painter, some of the most distinguished persons of his day having fat to him. He was appointed miniature painter to the Queen, and painted the chief Members of the Royal Family, and of the Orleans family. He died in 1860, and in the same year an exhibition of his collected works was opened at the Society of Arts. Pp. 19, 42, 44, 82, 83, 86, 92, 94, 123, 139-40, 156, 161, 182, 209, 229, 239, 240, 241, 244, 277, 279.

- VANDYKE, SIR ANTHONY. Born at Antwerp 1599, studied in Italy, and on his return practised both history and portrait. He soon established his pre-eminence as a portrait painter, and in 1629 visited England on the invitation of Charles I, but was disappointed and returned to Antwerp. In 1631 he came a second time to London, and was immediately received with the greatest favour, and employed by the King, who appointed him his painter, and granted him an annuity for life. He died in London in 1641. Pp. 32, 159, 164, 225, 235.

- WESTALL, RICHARD, R. A. Born 1765. Commenced art as an engraver. First attracted notice by some historical subjects in water colours, and then found fresh employment as an illustrator of books. His large oil paintings did not find purchasers. He died in 1836. Pp. 109, 156, 171.
- WHITE, ROBERT. Was born in London 1645, and brought up as an engraver. He showed much skill in his etchings, and learnt from David Loggan to draw portraits in pencil from the life, having it is said "a wonderful power in taking the air of a face." His portrait drawings are very numerous. He died in 1704. P. 261.

- WOOD, WILLIAM. Born about 1760. Practised miniature painting in London, and died in 1807 or 1808. Pp. 242, 243, 258, 269.

WORLIDGE, THOMAS. Born in 1701. Appears to have begun life as an engraver, and later to have practised miniature painting at Bath, where he was much in vogue, and found full employment, drawing in pencil and indian ink, finely-finished miniature portraits on vellum. He afterwards removed to London, and painted portraits in oil. But he is now chiefly known by his etchings, which are much esteemed and in the possession of most collectors. He died at HammerSmith in 1766. Pp. 41-2, 43, 191.

WRIGHT, JOHN WILLIAM. Born in London 1802. P. 95.

WRIGHT, THOMAS. Practised in London as a miniature painter the first half of the 18th century.

ZEEMAN, E. P. 38.

ZINCKE, CHRISTIAN F. Born at Dresden in 1684. Came to England in 1706, and studied here under Boit. He painted miniatures in enamel with such success that his great industry could scarcely keep pace with the number of his sitters. His works are most pleasing in expression, drawing, and colouring. He was particularly patronised by George II. and his Queen. His eyesight, so sadly tried by his art, failing in 1746, he retired from his profession, and died at Lambeth in 1767. Pp. 2, 6, 8, 10, 12, 18, 20, 22, 23, 25, 35, 38, 39, 46, 53, 56, 57, 61, 71, 74, 75, 77, 78, 80, 81, 82, 90, 91, 103, 116, 120, 121, 125, 138, 139, 143, 144, 142, 155, 163, 175, 187, 189, 194, 198, 210, 218, 220, 226, 228, 230, 231, 233, 234, 237, 259, 272.

ZOFFANI, JOHAN, R. A. Born at Frankfort. Came to England about 1764. Suffered from want of employment, but at length attained success by his dramatic portrait groups. Painted for many years in India. Died at Kew in 1810. P. 140.

ZUCCHERO, FREDERIGO. An eminent portrait painter who practised in Spain, France, and England. Born 1543, died at Rome 1609. Pp. 75, 140, 163, 209.
